INTRODUCTION

- 1. This action is about government transparency and accountability. Plaintiffs are nonprofit advocacy organizations with a well-established track record of using information requests to challenge government abuses and corporate wrongdoing, advocate for policy change, and educate the public about issues with our food system. For nearly a decade, Plaintiffs have closely monitored the Farm Service Agency's (FSA) administration of federal farm loans and loan guarantees to ensure that taxpayer dollars are not propping up multinational corporations, bankrolling unsustainable and unethical industrial animal agricultural practices, or pushing independent farmers out of the marketplace.
- 2. As part of their oversight and advocacy work, Plaintiffs have individually and jointly submitted numerous requests for records regarding FSA's farm loan programs under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)–(m) (2018). Without the requested records, Plaintiffs cannot determine whether FSA's farm loan programs comply with applicable laws, such as the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA), 42 U.S.C §§ 4321–47m (2018).
- 3. However, although FOIA requires FSA to release responsive records "promptly," FSA consistently fails to comply with FOIA's statutory deadlines with respect to Plaintiffs' requests. Further, FSA has repeatedly misapplied FOIA's specific and narrow exemptions to nonexempt information. Consequently, FSA has improperly withheld thousands of pages of responsive records, depriving Plaintiffs of their statutory right to obtain records containing crucial information about federal farm loans for nearly a decade without penalty.
- 4. FSA's longstanding pattern and practice of improperly withholding responsive records prevents Plaintiffs from overseeing FSA's administration of farm loan programs, and educating the public about FSA's activities and use of taxpayer funds. Further, FSA's consistent failure to release records obfuscates the agency's acquiescence to industrial polluters at the expense of independent farmers, public health, and the environment.
- 5. Plaintiffs respectfully ask this Court to enjoin FSA from withholding requested records, order FSA to release improperly withheld records, and grant declaratory relief. Plaintiffs also ask this Court to enjoin FSA from continuing to engage in its pattern and practice of violating FOIA.

JURISDICTION

- 6. This Court has subject matter jurisdiction over this action because the claims arise under a federal statute. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B); 28 U.S.C. § 1331.
- 7. This Court also has personal jurisdiction over the parties because Plaintiff Animal Legal Defense Fund's headquarters and principal place of business is located in Sonoma County, which is in the Northern District of California. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B).

VENUE

8. This Court is also the proper venue for this action because Plaintiff Animal Legal Defense Fund sent its FOIA requests to FSA, exchanged related correspondence, and received FSA's responses from its headquarters in Sonoma County, California. Thus, a substantial part of the events giving rise to this action occurred in Sonoma County, which is in the Northern District of California. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B); 28 U.S.C. § 1391(e); Civil L.R. 3-2(c).

INTRADISTRICT ASSIGNMENT

9. Because a substantial part of the events giving rise to this action occurred in Sonoma County, this action is properly assigned to the San Francisco Division. Civil L.R. 3-2(c), (d).

organization committed to fighting injustice, challenging corporate wrongdoing and government abuses, and protecting the Earth's sustainability. Public Justice's Food Project specifically aims to dismantle harmful industrial animal agricultural practices, promote corporate and government transparency in the food system, and support a fair market where independent farmers can compete and thrive. For nearly a decade, Public Justice has been committed to gathering and disseminating information about FSA's administration of federal loans to industrial animal production operations. To this end, Public Justice has submitted several FOIA requests for records regarding FSA's farm loan programs and internal FOIA policies. However, because FSA has repeatedly failed to release responsive records, Public Justice has not yet been able to determine how FSA administers federal funding to industrial animal production operations, or contribute to the public's understanding of FSA's administration of federal farm loan programs and NEPA compliance. As such, FSA's improper responses hinder Public Justice's advocacy and oversight efforts, and prevent the public from gaining important insight into FSA's funding of industrial animal agricultural operations. Because there is no other way to access this information, and Public Justice has a continued interest in FSA's funding of industrial animal agricultural operations, Public Justice has concrete plans to submit additional FOIA requests to FSA for records regarding its farm loan programs. Thus, unless this Court grants the requested relief, FSA will continue its pattern and practice of improperly withholding nonexempt information, thereby depriving Public Justice of its statutory right to agency records and stymieing Public Justice's advocacy and oversight efforts.

11. Plaintiff Animal Legal Defense Fund (ALDF) is a nonprofit organization whose mission is to protect the lives and advance the interests of animals through the legal system. ALDF works to achieve its goals by filing lawsuits, administrative comments, and rulemaking petitions to increase legal protections for animals; supporting strong animal protection legislation; and fighting against legislation that is harmful to animals. ALDF seeks to ensure transparency in the Concentrated Animal Feeding Operation (CAFO) system, specifically, which is paramount to its ability to protect farmed animals and ALDF members from CAFOs' immensely harmful effects. ALDF relies on and regularly seeks information through FOIA for its legal advocacy and in furtherance of its mission. ALDF has submitted numerous FOIA requests to various FSA offices regarding its administration of farm loans to CAFOs and slaughterhouses, and ALDF plans to continue doing so. In addition to using this information for legal advocacy (e.g., Dakota Rural Action v. FSA, No. 18-cv-2852 (D.D.C. filed Dec. 5, 2018)), ALDF also shares this information with its members and the public. For example, ALDF compiled the information it received through FOIA to create a map of CAFOs in Indiana, which is accessible to the public through ALDF's website (https://aldf.org/project/concentrated-animal-feedingoperations-indiana). FSA's improper responses and history of disregarding ALDF's rights under FOIA hinder ALDF's advocacy and oversight efforts by making it more difficult for ALDF to determine how FSA operates in this industry, how it spends public funds, and how it administers loans under federal law to industrial animal agriculture operators. This in turn prevents ALDF from sharing this information with its members, affected communities, and the public, thereby depriving them of important insight into FSA's funding of this industry. Unless this Court grants the requested relief, FSA will continue its pattern and practice of failing to adhere to FOIA's requirements and improperly withholding nonexempt information, thereby depriving ALDF of its statutory right to agency records and stymicing ALDF's advocacy and oversight efforts and ability to achieve its mission.

12. Plaintiff Center for Biological Diversity (CBD) is a national, nonprofit conservation organization whose mission is to ensure the preservation, protection, and restoration of biodiversity, native species, ecosystems, public lands and water, and public health through science, policy, and law. Based on an understanding that the health and vigor of human societies, plants and wildlife, and the natural environment are deeply intertwined, CBD strives to protect and secure a future for all species, great and small, hovering on the brink of extinction. Part of that mission is expressed through CBD's Environmental Health program, which seeks to protect biodiversity and human health from toxic pollution—including toxic and otherwise harmful agricultural pollution—while promoting a deep understanding of the inextricable connection between the health of humans and all other species. Informing the public about the activities of the federal government is central to CBD's mission and the goals of its Environmental Health Program. To that end, CBD educates and counsels its members and the public on environmental issues, policies, and laws through media, advocacy, its website, and publications that are widely distributed. CBD and its over 74,000 members are harmed by Defendants' violations of FOIA because such violations preclude CBD from obtaining information about FSA's review and approval of federal farm loans to industrial animal production operations, including its internal policies related to conducting and finalizing such reviews, and the harmful environmental and human health effects of these approvals. Defendants' failure to comply with FOIA harms CBD's ability to provide full, accurate, and current information to the public on a matter of public interest. Absent this information, CBD cannot advance its mission to protect native species and their habitats, and advocate for steps to reduce threats to public health and the environment.

- 13. Plaintiff Center for Food Safety (CFS) is a nonprofit environmental and consumer advocacy organization that works to address the impacts of our food production system on human health, animal welfare, and the environment. CFS's industrial animal agriculture program uses regulatory action, citizen engagement, litigation, and legislation to promote transparency and accountability in the animal agriculture industry. Through this work, the program aims to reduce the harmful impacts of industrial factory farm facilities on animal welfare, the environment, and human health to increase consumer awareness, availability, and accessibility of suitable alternatives by highlighting humane, organic, and pasture-based animal raising practices and producers. CFS uses FOIA to acquire information about how federal agencies operate and whether they are fulfilling their obligations under federal law. To that end, CFS has a keen interest in whether agencies like FSA comply with federal environmental laws before approving loans to industrial factory farms. In the past, CFS has experienced substantial delays in attempting to obtain FSA documents through FOIA. CFS expects similar delays in future FOIA requests as it is apparent that FSA has a pattern and practice of delaying the release of information related to its funding of industrial factory farms. Such delays frustrate CFS's mission to promote transparency and accountability in the animal agriculture industry. Thus, unless this Court grants the requested relief, FSA will continue its pattern and practice of disregarding CFS's rights under FOIA, thereby hindering CFS's advocacy and oversight efforts by preventing CFS from gaining valuable insight into FSA's administration of federal loans to industrial factory farms, and sharing this insight with the public and affected communities.
- 14. Plaintiff Food & Water Watch (FWW) is a national, nonprofit membership organization that mobilizes regular people to build political power to move bold and uncompromised solutions to the most pressing food, water, and climate problems of our time. FWW uses grassroots organizing, media outreach, public education, research, policy analysis, and litigation to protect people's health, communities, and democracy from the growing destructive power of the most powerful economic interests. Combating the harms associated with industrial livestock production, also known as factory farming, is one of FWW's priority issues, and FWW is engaged in several campaigns to reduce these industrial facilities' pollution through stronger regulation and enforcement, increased transparency, and public education and engagement. As part of these campaigns, FWW works to ensure FSA meets its obligations to conduct proper environmental reviews and to hold it accountable for the consequences of its agency actions. FWW and its members have a strong interest in obtaining, in a timely manner, information related to the Federal government's activities to finance and promote factory farms. Since at least 2016, FWW has sought such information from FSA by submitting FOIA requests for records regarding FSA loans or loan guarantees to factory farms. However, because FSA inappropriately delayed the release of and withheld and redacted responsive records, FWW's efforts have been stymied and it has been unable to gain the understanding of FSA's funding of factory farms necessary to pursue its mission and inform and empower impacted communities. FWW intends to again seek records from FSA through FOIA requests in the future as part of its ongoing factory farm campaigns, and will again be stymied so long as FSA continues its pattern and practice of inappropriately delaying the release of responsive records or withholding or redacting such records.

Defendant

Department of Agriculture (USDA) and thus subject to FOIA. 5 U.S.C. § 552(f)(1). FSA is responsible for administering direct farm loans to eligible agricultural producers or landowners, and farm loan guarantees to eligible lenders. FSA is also responsible for ensuring that its farm loan programs comply with NEPA, 42 U.S.C. § 4332(c), and other applicable laws. Before FSA provides financing for a proposed agricultural action, such as the construction of a concentrated animal feeding operation (CAFO), FSA must review the proposed action, determine the potential environmental impacts, and conduct further analysis as necessary. Thus, FSA is the "agency" that has control and possession of the requested "record[s]" at issue here. 5 U.S.C. § 552(f)(2).

STATUTORY BACKGROUND

16. Congress enacted FOIA to promote government transparency and accountability. See, e.g., Dep't of Air Force v. Rose, 425 U.S. 352, 360–61 (1976) (noting that "disclosure, not secrecy is the dominant objective of the Act"). To this end, FOIA establishes the public's right "to pierce the veil of administrative secrecy" and access federal agency records. Id.

- 17. FOIA requires federal agencies to release requested records to the requester, unless the records fall under one of the statute's nine enumerated exemptions, which "were explicitly made exclusive" and "must be narrowly construed" in keeping with FOIA's presumption in favor of disclosure. Milner v. Dep't of Navy, 562 U.S. 562, 566 (2011).
- 18. FOIA imposes stringent deadlines on federal agencies regarding initial determinations in response to FOIA requests. Within twenty working days of receiving a proper FOIA request, an agency must determine whether it will release the requested records, and notify the requester of the agency's determination, the reasons for its decision, and the requester's right to appeal an adverse determination to the head of the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(6)(A).
- 19. An agency's initial determination "must be more than just an initial statement that the agency will generally comply with a FOIA request and will produce non-exempt documents and claim exemptions in the future." Citizens for Responsibility & Ethics in Wash. v. Fed. Election Comm'n (CREW), 711 F.3d 180, 188 (D.C. Cir. 2013).
- 20. If an agency does not comply with "FOIA's explicit timelines [for making an initial determination], the penalty is that the agency cannot rely on the administrative exhaustion requirement to keep cases [out of] court." Id. at 190–91; see also 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(6)(C)(i). The requester thus has "immediate recourse to the courts to compel the agency's response to [her] FOIA request[s]." Oglesby v. Dep't of Army, 920 F.2d 57, 64 (D.C. Cir. 1990).
- 21. To "trigger the administrative exhaustion requirement," an agency must complete "at least" three substantive requirements: "(1) gather and review the documents; (2) determine and communicate the scope of the documents it intends to produce and withhold, and the reasons for withholding any documents; and (3) inform the requester that it can appeal whatever portion of the 'determination' is adverse." CREW, 711 F.3d at 188; see also Oglesby, 920 F.2d at 67 (finding that an agency's response did not trigger exhaustion requirement because "merely inform[ing] [the requester] that he could call the agency for further information . . . did not qualify as notice of . . . right to appeal").

22. Anytime an agency makes a determination to comply with a request, the agency must have a duty to prevent these abuses").

- make the records "promptly available," 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(3)(A), (6)(C)(i), "which . . . typically . . . mean[s] within days or a few weeks of a 'determination,' not months or years." CREW, 711 F.3d at 188; see also Long v. IRS, 693 F.2d 907, 910 (9th Cir. 1982) (holding that an agency's unreasonable delay in disclosing nonexempt records violated FOIA, and "courts"
- 23. FOIA also requires agencies to provide requestors "information about the status of [a request]," including "an estimated date on which the agency will complete action on the request." 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(7)(B)(ii).
- 24. In addition, FOIA requires agencies to waive fees whenever "disclosure of the information is in the public interest because it is likely to contribute significantly to public understanding of the operations or activities of the government and is not primarily in the commercial interest of the requester." Id. § 552(a)(4)(A)(iii).
- 25. FOIA further requires an agency to "make reasonable efforts to search for responsive records," id. § 522(a)(3)(C), using methods "reasonably calculated to uncover all relevant documents." Zemansky v. EPA, 767 F.2d 569, 571 (9th Cir. 1985) (emphasis added); see also Oglesby, 920 F.2d at 68 (An "agency cannot limit its search to only one record system if there are others that are likely to turn up the information requested.").
- 26. Likewise, "if an agency has reason to know that certain places may contain responsive documents," the agency must search those places. Valencia-Lucena v. U.S. Coast Guard, 180 F.3d 321, 327 (D.C. Cir. 1999); Our Children's Earth Found. v. Nat'l Marine Fisheries Serv., 85 F. Supp. 3d 1074, 1083 (N.D. Cal. 2015) (holding that an agency's search was inadequate because it failed to search places it "had reason to know . . . contained responsive documents").
- The agency bears the burden of demonstrating in reasonable detail that the "search terms and type of search performed" was likely to uncover all responsive records. Oglesby, 920 F.2d at 68; see also Our Children's Earth Found., 85 F. Supp. 3d at 1082 (holding that an agency must submit affidavits describing "what records were searched, by whom, and through what process" to satisfy burden).

- 28. The agency must also demonstrate that the scope of the agency's search was adequate. In tailoring the scope of the search, an agency "ha[s] a duty to construe FOIA records requests liberally." Yagman v. Pompeo, 868 F.3d 1075, 1079 (9th Cir. 2017) (holding that the scope of a request is clear so long as it provides "some reasonable description" of the requested records, such as times, dates, locations, types of documents, or types of information) (emphasis in original); see also Law. Comm. for Civ. Rights of S.F. Bay Area v. Dep't of Treasury, 534 F. Supp. 2d 1126, 1130–31 (N.D. Cal. 2008) ("[A]n agency cannot withhold a record that is reasonably within the scope of the request on the grounds that the record has not been specifically named by the requester.").
- 29. Although an agency can ask requestors to "downsize the scope of [a] FOIA request," an agency cannot "demand . . . specific modifications as a condition for any response." Pub. Emps. for Envtl. Resp. v. EPA, 314 F. Supp. 3d 68, 78 (D.D.C. 2018) (holding that the requestor's "refusal to drop [part of reasonably clear request] does not excuse the agency's obligation to respond").
- 30. Once an agency identifies a responsive record, the agency must disclose the entire record "as a unit," unless a statutory exemption allows the agency "to redact specific information within [the record]." Am. Immigr. Law. Ass'n v. Exec. Off. for Immigr. Rev., 830 F.3d 667, 677 (D.C. Cir. 2016); see also 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(3)(A), (d). An agency cannot "redact particular information within the responsive record on the basis that the information is non-responsive." Am. Immigr. Law. Ass'n, 830 F.3d at 678.
- 31. An agency must construe FOIA's nine enumerated exemptions "narrowly." Milner, 562 U.S. at 565. An agency can only withhold information in a responsive record "if the agency reasonably foresees that disclosure would harm an interest protected by an exemption described in [FOIA]" or "disclosure is prohibited by law." 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(8)(A).
- 32. FOIA Exemption 3 allows agencies to withhold records "specifically exempted from disclosure by [certain] statute[s]." Id. § 552(b)(3). Exemption 3 only applies when an agency (1) relies on a statute that "qualifies as a withholding statute under Exemption 3"; and (2) withholds

"information that falls within the scope of the withholding statute." CIA v. Sims, 471 U.S. 159, 168–69 (1985); Carlson v. U.S. Postal Serv., 504 F.3d 1123, 1127 (9th Cir. 2007).

- 33. FOIA Exemption 6 allows agencies to withhold "personnel and medical files and similar files" when the disclosure of such information "would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6). Exemption 6 only applies when (1) the requested information is a personnel, medical, or similar file; (2) there is a significant privacy interest at stake; and (3) the privacy interest outweighs the public interest in disclosure. Rojas v. FAA, 941 F.3d 392, 404–07 (9th Cir. 2019).
- 34. A "similar file" is a "record[] containing information that applies to particular individuals." Kowack v. U.S. Forest Serv., 766 F.3d 1130, 1133 (9th Cir. 2014). If a record contains information about a particular individual that is "a matter of public record," or if a document "do[es] not disclose personal information about [the individual]," Exemption 6 does not apply. Gordon v. FBI, 390 F. Supp. 2d 897, 902 (N.D. Cal. 2004) (holding that an agency improperly redacted the names of agency employees). Moreover, even when there is a privacy interest at stake, and the individual's privacy interest outweighs the public interest, "even personal information must be disclosed unless doing so is 'clearly unwarranted.'" Kowack, 766 F.3d at 1133 ("The only public interest we consider is the extent to which disclosure of the information sought would she[d] light on an agency's performance of its statutory duties or otherwise let citizens know what their government is up to.").
- 35. The agency bears the burden of proving that it properly withheld records or portions of records under one of FOIA's enumerated exemptions. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). To satisfy this burden, the agency must submit affidavits with "reasonably detailed descriptions of the [withheld] documents" and "allege facts sufficient to establish an exemption." Lewis v. IRS, 823 F.2d 375, 378 (9th Cir. 1987).
- 36. Further, if information contained in a document falls within one of FOIA's enumerated exemptions, an agency cannot simply withhold the entire document. See Hamdan v. DOJ, 797 F.3d 759, 778–79 (9th Cir. 2015) (noting that courts must "make a specific finding that no information contained in each document or substantial portion of a document withheld is

- segregable"). An agency must take reasonable steps to segregate and disclose "all reasonably segregable portions of a [withheld] document." Id.; 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(8)(A)(ii).
- 37. If the agency cannot sufficiently justify withholding records in full or in part, this Court has jurisdiction "to enjoin [an] agency from withholding agency records and to order the production of any agency records improperly withheld." 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). This Court can also provide injunctive relief "to bar future [FOIA] violations that are likely to occur." Long, 693 F.2d at 909 (holding that "injunctive relief is appropriate . . . to prevent prolonged delays and repeated litigation over disclosure of the same type of documents in the future").
- 38. Moreover, even if an agency has released all the requested records with respect to a specific FOIA request, a plaintiff can still seek declaratory or injunctive relief for the agency's pattern or practice of violating FOIA if (1) the agency's FOIA violation was "not merely an isolated incident"; (2) the plaintiff was personally harmed by the agency's pattern or practice; and (3) the plaintiff is likely to be harmed by the agency's pattern or practice in the future. Hajro v. U.S. Citizen. & Immigr. Serv., 811 F.3d 1086, 1103 (9th Cir. 2016). Plaintiffs can prove that the agency's FOIA violation was not an isolated event in "a number of ways," including, for example, "evidence that [they] ha[ve] been subjected to a FOIA violation more than once," or "affidavits of people similarly situated to the plaintiff[s] who were also harmed by the pattern or practice." Id. at 1104.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

- 39. Plaintiffs are nonprofit public interest organizations committed to building a more sustainable and ethical food system. To this end, Plaintiffs rely on FOIA requests to monitor agency action and open agency and corporate wrongdoing to public scrutiny.
- 40. For more than a decade, Plaintiffs have been particularly concerned about the extent to which FSA's farm loan programs support industrial animal agricultural operations that are harming animals, the environment, public health, and local communities. However, FSA's administration of farm loan programs has largely escaped public scrutiny because very little information regarding FSA's financial assistance programs is readily available to the public.

- 41. To gain more information, Plaintiffs have submitted multiple FOIA requests for records relating to FSA's administration of federal farm loans, loan guarantees, and other assistance programs to industrial animal production operations. Plaintiffs often sought agency records regarding specific agricultural operations or geographical areas, and the scope of their requests were specifically aimed at uncovering whether FSA considers environmental impacts before awarding federal farm loans to an applicant, as required under NEPA, and whether FSA oversees the use of such funds after distribution.
- 42. Without release of the requested information, Plaintiffs cannot determine whether FSA's farm loan programs comply with NEPA or other applicable laws. Nor can Plaintiffs inform the public about the environmental, economic, and public health impacts of FSA's financial activities.
- 43. Despite the public's significant interest in understanding the environmental, economic, and public health impacts of FSA's farm loan programs in a timely manner, FSA has consistently failed to respond properly to Plaintiffs' FOIA requests. Specifically, FSA has regularly delayed determinations, communications, and actual productions of responsive records for months and, in some cases, years. Further, FSA has routinely withheld thousands of pages of nonexempt information by broadly construing and misapplying one or more of FOIA's nine, limited exemptions.
- 44. Specifically, under Exemption 3, FSA has improperly withheld information that falls outside the scope of the claimed withholding statute, such as income/expense trends and environmental analyses and compliance determinations prepared by FSA farm loan officers.
- 45. Similarly, under Exemption 6, FSA has improperly withheld information that does not raise a sufficient privacy interest to outweigh the substantial public interest in disclosure, such as maps and parcel data with no identifiable connection to a particular individual.
- 46. FSA's long history of improperly handling Plaintiffs' requests for agency records establishes FSA's pattern and practice of disregarding FOIA's explicit requirements and deadlines, and unduly delaying actual production of records. Moreover, despite FOIA's "general philosophy of full agency disclosure," Rose, 425 U.S. at 360–61, FSA has a well-established pattern and practice of violating FOIA by unlawfully withholding nonexempt information under Exemptions 3 and 6.

47. FSA's pattern and practice of violating FOIA undermines the statute's clear "congressional objective" of "disclosure, not secrecy" and prevents Plaintiffs from "pierc[ing] the veil of administrative secrecy" and "open[ing] [FSA] action to the light of public scrutiny." Id. Thus, Plaintiffs urge this Court to grant the requested declaratory and injunctive relief to prevent continuing injury to Plaintiffs and the public.

FSA's History of Disregarding Plaintiffs' Rights under FOIA

Public Justice's March 2016 Request

- 48. FSA has a history of disregarding Public Justice's rights under FOIA.
- 49. For example, on March 23, 2016, FSA received Public Justice's FOIA request for information relating to three specific animal feeding operations in Ohio. Public Justice also requested a fee waiver because the released records would broaden public understanding of the federal government's oversight and regulation of industrial animal agriculture operations.
- 50. FSA responded to the request on August 24, 2017, more than a year after the agency received Public Justice's reasonably described request.<sup>3</sup> Despite the delay, FSA only released 6 pages in full, and 43 pages with substantial redactions under FOIA Exemptions 3 and 6.<sup>4</sup>
- 51. FSA withheld information under Exemption 3, claiming that section 1619(b) of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act (FCEA), 7 U.S.C. § 8791(b), exempted "information FSA obtained from . . . agricultural producer[s] or . . . landowner[s] that concerns their farming or agricultural operation[s], including . . . farming practices, conservation practices, or the land itself." However, FSA's description of the scope of the withholding statute is too broad because the statute does not protect all information provided by agricultural producers or landowners, just the information they provided "in order to participate in [FSA's] programs," id. § 8791(b)(2)(A) (emphasis added), or "geospatial information otherwise maintained by the [FSA] about agricultural land or operations for which [such] information . . . is provided," id. § (b)(2)(B). Thus, FSA interpreted the withholding statute too liberally.

- 52. Moreover, FSA relied on Exemption 3 to withhold information that is not provided by agricultural producers or landowners, such as compliance determinations made by county committees. Thus, FSA withheld information that fails to satisfy the specific criteria of the withholding statute.
- 53. Further, according to FSA, "[t]he type of information withheld [under 7 U.S.C. § 8791(b)] includes FSA loan participant's crop and acreage information." However, such information does not fall within Exemption 3 because it is segregable and disclosable statistical or aggregate information and/or payment information. The withholding statute expressly allows FSA to disclose information that "has been transformed into a statistical or aggregate form without naming . . . individual owner[s], operator[s], or producer[s]," or "payment information (including payment information and the names and addresses of recipients of payments) under any . . . program that is otherwise authorized by law." Id. § (b)(4)(A), (B). Thus, FSA improperly withheld nonexempt information under Exemption 3.
- 54. FSA also claimed that Exemption 6 protected basic information about "FSA loan" participant[s]." However, the withheld information does not fall within Exemption 6 because it is not personal information linked to a particular individual. Further, because there is very little publicly available information about FSA's farm loan programs, the public interest in disclosure is substantial. Thus, FSA improperly withheld nonexempt information under Exemption 6.

55. On November 21, 2017, Public Justice promptly appealed FSA's improper determination to withhold responsive records, pursuant to FSA's instructions. The agency did not respond until July 3, 2019, nearly two years later. In its response, FSA explained that despite initially "cit[ing] only one type of information under Exemption 3," Exemption 3 "applie[d] to all the material redacted" in the released records. Although FSA expressly admitted that it had improperly redacted "address[es]" and other information "relating to business entities" under Exemption 6, FSA continued to withhold records under Exemption 3. Thus, because the information initially redacted under Exemption 6 included segregable and disclosable statistical or aggregate information and/or payment information, FSA continued to improperly withhold nonexempt information under Exemption 3 on appeal.

Public Justice's March 2017 Request

- 56. Likewise, on March 31, 2017, Public Justice submitted a request to FSA for records relating to livestock and poultry farms in specific Ohio zip codes. <sup>12</sup> Public Justice explained that it was entitled to a fee waiver because the requested records would "contribute significantly to public understanding" of FSA's role in funding industrial livestock and poultry operations. <sup>13</sup>
- 57. FSA did not make a determination regarding the scope of its response within twenty working days of receiving Public Justice's request. Instead, on April 21, 2017, fourteen working

- 66. On November 2, 2017, after FSA asked ALDF to narrow the scope of the request, ALDF agreed to limit the request to six states—California, Arkansas, Kansas, Oklahoma, Iowa, and New York—in order for the agency to process the request more quickly.<sup>27</sup>
- 67. Although ALDF clearly identified the forms sought in its original request, and ALDF agreed to further narrow the request for quicker processing, FSA asked ALDF to clarify "which type of environmental screening worksheets [it was] seeking (for which type of producer) and for which state," and claimed that it could not "proceed further . . . until [it] receive[d] additional written clarification." Two weeks later, on November 30, 2017, FSA again contacted ALDF about some "confusion as to what documents [ALDF is] looking for and the date range," and asked ALDF to confirm that it was requesting all environmental screening worksheets completed for "medium CAFOs" since August 3, 2016. <sup>29</sup>
- 68. After ALDF simply confirmed that FSA had accurately "excerpted . . . the text of [ALDF's] original request," FSA informed ALDF that it had sufficiently "clarified" the request, and the agency deemed the request "perfected" on December 5, 2017, even though FSA merely restated the exact wording of the original request. Thus, FSA delayed processing the request for more than a month by asking for unnecessary clarification.
- 69. On December 18, 2017, FSA responded to ALDF's FOIA request.<sup>32</sup> FSA uncovered 875 pages of responsive records, but only released 666 pages of responsive records in full. FSA withheld 209 pages in part under FOIA Exemptions 3 and 6.

70. FSA claimed that Exemption 3 protected records specifically exempted from disclosure under section 1619(b) of the FCEA, "includ[ing] information that FSA has obtained from agricultural producers or landowners that concerns their farming or agricultural operation, including production and marketing of agricultural commodities and livestock, farming practices, conservation practices or the land itself." However, FSA relied on Exemption 3 to withhold information that is not provided by agricultural producers or landowners, such as environmental assessments prepared for and by FSA employees. Thus, FSA withheld information that fails to satisfy the specific criteria of the withholding statute.

- 71. Further, according to FSA, "[t]he type of information withheld includes . . . loan amount . . . and number of acres." However, such information does not fall within Exemption 3 because it is segregable and disclosable statistical or aggregate information and/or payment information. Thus, FSA improperly withheld nonexempt information under Exemption 3.
- 72. FSA also claimed that Exemption 6 protected "personal information affecting an individual's privacy."<sup>35</sup> According to FSA, "[t]he records withheld under this exemption are . . . loan amount . . . and number of acres."<sup>36</sup> However, such information does not fall within Exemption 6 because it is not personal information linked to a particular individual, and the public interest in disclosure is substantial. Thus, FSA improperly withheld nonexempt information under Exemption 6.

ALDF's November 2017 Request

73. On November 30, 2017, ALDF submitted a FOIA request to FSA for all records relating to FSA's funding of a new, high-volume chicken slaughterhouse in Arkansas, including any environmental review that FSA conducted.

- 74. On January 11, 2018, FSA provided its first interim response to ALDF's FOIA request.<sup>37</sup> Over the course of the next month, FSA provided two additional responses. FSA submitted its third and final response on February 2, 2018.<sup>38</sup> In total, FSA withheld hundreds of pages in part and in full under FOIA Exemptions 3 and 6.
- 75. FSA failed to describe the scope of each exemption. FSA also failed to indicate which statute it was relying on to withhold information under Exemption 3, forcing Plaintiffs to search through the agency's 2018 FOIA raw data for clarification.<sup>39</sup> From the limited information available, Plaintiffs discovered that FSA withheld records under section 1619(b) of the FCEA.
- 76. According to FSA, the pages withheld in full include "maps, legal descriptions of producer land . . . loan narratives, projected annual cash flow and income/expense trends." However, such information does not fall within Exemption 3 because it is segregable and disclosable statistical or aggregate information and/or payment information. Moreover, such information does not fall within Exemption 6 because it is not personal information linked to a particular individual, and the public interest in disclosure is substantial. Thus, FSA improperly withheld nonexempt information under Exemptions 3 and 6.

ALDF's May 1, 2018 Request

77. Similarly, on May 1, 2018, ALDF submitted a FOIA request to FSA for specific types of records regarding "animal agricultural facilities in Indiana for which FSA made a decision after August 3, 2016 on either (1) a Direct Loan application for more than $99,999; or (2) a Guaranteed Loan application for more than $299,999."<sup>41</sup> The specific types of records sought included "Credit Presentation" forms, "application form[s]," and "environmental review facility detail information and photos of producers land."49 However, such information does not 1 fall within Exemption 6 because it is not personal information linked to a particular individual, 2 3 and the public interest in disclosure is substantial. Thus, FSA improperly withheld nonexempt 4 information under Exemption 6. 5 ALDF's May 25, 2018 Request 6 82. Furthermore, on May 25, 2018, ALDF submitted a FOIA request to FSA for all 7 environmental screening worksheets that FSA had completed for pig operations in Minnesota classified as "medium CAFOs" since August 3, 2016. 50 ALDF also requested a fee waiver 8 9 because disclosure of the requested records would significantly contribute to the public's understanding of FSA's NEPA process.<sup>51</sup> 10 11 83. On July 10, 2018, FSA provided its final response to ALDF's FOIA request. 52 FSA 12 released 282 pages in full, but withheld 121 pages in part under FOIA Exemptions 3 and 6. FSA 13 did not specify the total number of responsive records or otherwise indicate whether it was 14 withholding any pages in full. 84. FSA claimed that Exemption 3 protected records specifically exempted from disclosure 15 under section 1619(b) of the FCEA.<sup>53</sup> However, FSA relied on Exemption 3 to withhold 16 17 information that is not provided by agricultural producers or landowners, such as environmental 18 assessments prepared for and by FSA employees. Thus, FSA withheld information that fails to 19 satisfy the specific criteria of the withholding statute. 20 85. - 91. FSA also claimed that Exemption 6 protected "personal information affecting an individual's privacy."62 According to FSA, "[t]he records withheld under this exemption are . . . maps, producer farm report data, number of acres and photos of producer farm."63 However, such information does not fall within Exemption 6 because it is not personal information linked to a particular individual, and the public interest in disclosure is substantial. Thus, FSA improperly withheld nonexempt information under Exemption 6.

- 92. FSA's history of disregarding ALDF's rights under FOIA hinders ALDF's advocacy and oversight efforts by preventing ALDF from gaining valuable insight into FSA's administration of federal loans to industrial animal agriculture operators, and sharing this insight with the public, its supporters, and affected communities.

FWW's June 2016 Request

- 93. FSA has a history of disregarding FWW's rights under FOIA.
- 94. For example, on June 15, 2016, FWW submitted a FOIA request to FSA regarding its loan or loan guarantee for the construction of a broiler chicken factory farm in Caroline County, Maryland.<sup>64</sup> FWW requested a fee waiver because disclosure of the responsive records would significantly contribute to the public's understanding of FSA's activities, and FWW had no commercial interest in the requested information.<sup>65</sup>

FIRST CLAIM FOR RELIEF:

VIOLATION OF THE FREEDOM OF INFORMATION ACT

Failure to Make a Proper Initial Determination

- 113. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate the allegations made in all preceding paragraphs.
- 114. On April 17, 2019, Plaintiffs jointly submitted a proper request to FSA for records regarding the agency's policies for processing FOIA requests. Specifically, Plaintiffs requested "all records mentioning or containing FSA's directives and/or policies for responding to and/or processing FOIA requests and appeals."
- 115. FOIA requires FSA to make and communicate an initial determination within twenty working days of receiving a proper FOIA request. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(3)(A).
- 116. To make and communicate a proper determination under FOIA, FSA must (1) gather and review responsive documents; (2) determine and communicate the scope of the documents that the agency intends to produce and its reasons for withholding any documents; and (3) inform requesters how to appeal adverse determinations. CREW, 711 F.3d at 188.
  - 117. FSA never informed Plaintiffs of their right to appeal FSA's adverse determination.
- 118. Thus, FSA violated FOIA by failing to make a proper initial determination within twenty working days of receiving Plaintiffs' joint request.
- 119. Because FSA failed to make and communicate a proper determination, Plaintiffs have exhausted their administrative remedies. See CREW, 711 F.3d at 188; 5 U.S.C. § (a)(6)(C)(i).
- 120. FSA's failure to make a proper initial determination prevents Plaintiffs from understanding FSA's FOIA processes and policies, which in turn hinders Plaintiffs' ability to obtain the records they need to oversee FSA's farm loan programs and educate the public.
- 121. This Court should declare that FSA violated FOIA by failing to make a proper initial determination with respect to Plaintiffs' joint request.

SECOND CLAIM FOR RELIEF:

VIOLATION OF THE FREEDOM OF INFORMATION ACT

Failure to Conduct an Adequate Search

- 122. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate the allegations made in all preceding paragraphs.
- 123. Because Plaintiffs jointly submitted a proper FOIA request for records regarding the agency's policies for processing FOIA requests, FOIA requires FSA to conduct a search "reasonably calculated to uncover all relevant documents." Zemansky, 767 F.2d at 571.
- 124. Plaintiffs requested all types of information related to FSA's internal directives or processes for handling FOIA requests or appeals. However, FSA claimed that there were only two responsive records, neither of which directly related to FSA's FOIA policies.
- 125. Moreover, Plaintiffs requested all types of documents and did not limit their request to correspondence. However, FSA only released emails.
- 126. Thus, FSA violated FOIA by failing to conduct a search reasonably calculated to uncover all types of documents and information responsive to Plaintiffs' joint request.
- 127. In addition, FSA's search failed to uncover responsive agency records that FSA had reason to know existed. For example, in response to FWW's June 2016 request, FSA withheld "discussions within FSA that concern requests for records that pertain to the Environmental Assessment." Because these discussions would have been highly responsive to Plaintiffs' request as well, a reasonably calculated search should have uncovered these agency records.
- 128. Thus, FSA violated FOIA by unlawfully narrowing the scope of Plaintiffs' reasonably specific request and conducting an inadequate search.
- 129. FSA must produce a reasonably detailed affidavit demonstrating that its search methods, including the search terms and types of documents searched, were reasonably likely to uncover all responsive records.
- 130. Because FSA failed to make and communicate a proper determination, Plaintiffs have exhausted their administrative remedies. See CREW, 711 F.3d at 188; 5 U.S.C. § (a)(6)(C)(i).

- FSA's failure to conduct an adequate search prevents Plaintiffs from understanding FSA's FOIA processes and policies, which in turn hinders Plaintiffs' ability to obtain the records they need to oversee FSA's farm loan programs and educate the public.
- 132. This Court should declare that FSA violated FOIA by failing to conduct an adequate search for all agency records responsive to Plaintiffs' joint request.
- 133. To prevent continuing injury to Plaintiffs, this Court should order FSA to conduct an adequate search and release any improperly withheld records. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B).

THIRD CLAIM FOR RELIEF:

VIOLATION OF THE FREEDOM OF INFORMATION ACT

Failure to Promptly Release Agency Records

- 134. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate the allegations made in all preceding paragraphs.
- 135. Because Plaintiffs jointly submitted a proper FOIA request for records regarding the agency's policies for processing FOIA requests, FOIA requires FSA to make responsive records "promptly available." 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(3)(A), (6)(C)(i).
- 136. Despite only releasing two short emails, FSA unreasonably delayed production of these documents for more than three months.
  - 137. Thus, FSA violated FOIA by unduly delaying production of the requested records.
- 138. Because FSA failed to make and communicate a proper determination, Plaintiffs have exhausted their administrative remedies. See CREW, 711 F.3d at 188; 5 U.S.C. § (a)(6)(C)(i).
- 139. FSA's failure to promptly release the requested records prevents Plaintiffs from understanding FSA's FOIA processes and policies, which in turn hinders Plaintiffs' ability to obtain the records they need to oversee FSA's farm loan programs and educate the public.
- 140. This Court should declare that FSA violated FOIA by unduly delaying production of the records responsive to Plaintiffs' joint request.

FOURTH CLAIM FOR RELIEF:

VIOLATION OF THE FREEDOM OF INFORMATION ACT

Pattern & Practice of Unduly Delaying Actual Productions

- 141. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate the allegations made in all preceding paragraphs.
- 142. Because Plaintiffs' FOIA requests "reasonably describe[d]" the records sought and complied with FSA's published rules, FSA was obligated to make the requested records "promptly available," "which "mean[s] within days or a few weeks of a 'determination,' not months or years." CREW, 711 F.3d at 188; 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(3)(A), (6)(C)(i).
- 143. FSA regularly failed to release responsive records for several months, and in some cases years, by issuing unsubstantiated fee waiver denials, seeking unnecessary clarification or information from Plaintiffs, and otherwise unduly delaying actual production of records.

Public Justice's March 2016 Request

144. For example, Public Justice submitted a proper FOIA request and fee waiver request in March 2016, but FSA did not release responsive records until August 24, 2017, more than a year after Public Justice submitted the request.

FWW's June 2016 Request

145. FWW submitted a proper FOIA request and fee waiver request in June 2016, but FSA delayed actual production of documents for several months to resolve unsubstantiated fee-related issues. FSA dodged FWW's fee waiver request on September 9, 2016, after revising its threatened cost estimate from $500 to $0, and released responsive records several days later, on September 28, 2016.

Public Justice's March 2017 Request

146. Public Justice submitted a proper request and fee waiver in March 2017, but FSA again delayed actual production for several months to resolve unsubstantiated fee-related issues. Further, although FSA granted Public Justice's fee waiver request in July 2017, the agency continued to delay actual production for several additional months. FSA did not release the responsive records until February 2018, nearly a year after Public Justice submitted the request.

ALDF's October 2017 Request

- 147. ALDF submitted a proper request in October 2017, but FSA again delayed actual production for several weeks to seek unnecessary clarification from ALDF. Although ALDF limited the scope of the request to specific documents ("FSA Form 860") and dates ("since August 3, 2016"), and ALDF agreed to further limit the request to certain states for faster processing, FSA asked ALDF to provide additional clarification multiple times, and claimed that it could not proceed until ALDF narrowed the scope of the request. However, FSA eventually deemed the request "perfected" without making any changes to the language or scope of the initial request.
- 148. Thus, FSA has a pattern or practice of violating FOIA by unduly delaying actual production of requested records for several months and sometimes years.
- 149. FSA's pattern and practice has prevented Plaintiffs from obtaining the information they need to watchdog FSA's federal farm loan programs, analyze FSA's compliance with NEPA and other applicable statutes, and educate the public about FSA's activities and use of federal funds. Further, FSA's pattern and practice will significantly impair Plaintiffs' ability to access agency records in the future because Plaintiffs will continue to submit FOIA requests to FSA to obtain the information they need to fulfill their organizational missions.
- 150. Unless this Court grants the requested injunctive and declaratory relief, FSA will continue its pattern and practice of unduly delaying actual production of requested records, thereby depriving Plaintiffs of their statutory right to agency records, stymieing Plaintiffs' important monitoring and advocacy efforts, and enabling FSA to escape public scrutiny.

FIFTH CLAIM FOR RELIEF:

VIOLATION OF THE FREEDOM OF INFORMATION ACT

Pattern & Practice of Improperly Withholding Records under FOIA Exemption 3

- 151. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate the allegations made in all preceding paragraphs.
- 152. Whenever FSA identifies a responsive record, it must disclose the entire record unless one of FOIA's nine enumerated exemptions applies to information within the record. 5 U.S.C. §

552(a)(3)(A), (d). FOIA requires FSA to construe the enumerated exemptions narrowly, in keeping with the statute's principal purpose of disclosure.

- 153. FOIA further requires FSA to take reasonable steps to segregate and release any nonexempt information contained in a responsive record. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(8)(A)(ii).
- 154. FSA withheld thousands of pages of responsive records from Plaintiffs by claiming that nonexempt information contained in responsive records fell under FOIA Exemption 3.
- 155. FOIA Exemption 3 only allows FSA to withhold information "specifically exempted from disclosure by [certain] statutes." Id. § 552(b)(3). If information in a responsive record falls outside the scope of the withholding statute, Exemption 3 does not apply to the information, and FSA must segregate and release the information to the requestor.
- 156. Although FOIA requires agencies to construe exemptions narrowly and in favor of disclosure, FSA frequently withheld responsive records from Plaintiffs under Exemption 3 by construing the scope of the withholding statute too broadly. Specifically, FSA frequently claimed 7 U.S.C. § 8791(b)(2) protects all "information FSA . . . obtained from agricultural producers or landowners that concerns their farming or agricultural operations." However, the statute does not protect all information "obtained from" agricultural producers or landowners, just the information "provided by" these entities "in order to participate in [FSA's] programs." (emphasis added). Moreover, the statute does not protect all information FSA maintains about agricultural land or operations for which agricultural producers or landowners provided information for funding purposes, just "geospatial information." Id. Thus, FSA interpreted the withholding statute too liberally because the agency ignored the statute's limiting language.
- 157. In addition, FSA frequently withheld nonexempt information by ignoring the withholding statute's exemption for numerical or quantitative information with no discernable connection to a particular agricultural producer, landowner, or site. FSA can release such information because the withholding statute expressly allows FSA to disclose information that "has been transformed into a statistical . . . form without naming (i) any individual owner, operator, or producer; or (ii) specific data gathering site." Id. § (b)(4)(B).

158. FSA also frequently withheld nonexempt information by ignoring the withholding statute's exemption for information calculated by combining multiple data sources, including information about multiple loans or farms, with no discernable connection to a particular agricultural producer, landowner, or site. FSA can release such information because the withholding statute expressly allows FSA to disclose information that "has been transformed into a . . . aggregate form without naming (i) any individual owner, operator, or producer; or (ii) specific data gathering site." Id. § (b)(4)(B).

159. FSA also frequently withheld nonexempt information by ignoring the withholding statute's exemption for information about federal farm loan payments and recipients. FSA can release such information because the withholding statute expressly allows FSA to disclose "payment information (including payment information and the names and addresses of recipients of payments) under any Department program that is otherwise authorized by law," including FSA's federal farm loan and loan guarantee programs. Id. § (b)(4)(A). Unlike the exemptions for aggregate or statistical information, which expressly exclude information that "nam[es] any individual owner, operator, or producer," the exemption for payment information expressly includes the "names and addresses" of federal farm loan recipients, including individual agricultural producers or landowners who receive farm loans and lenders who receive farm loan guarantees from FSA.

Public Justice's March 2016 Request

160. For example, in response to Public Justice's March 2016 request, FSA claimed "[t]he type of information withheld [under 7 U.S.C. § 8791(b)] includes FSA loan participant's crop and acreage information." However, FSA withheld records that were not provided by agricultural producers or landowners, such as compliance determinations by county committees. Thus, FSA improperly withheld records that did not meet the specific criteria of the withholding statute. Moreover, FSA withheld numerical and/or quantitative information with no discernable connection to a particular individual or site, as well as information from and/or about multiple data sources with no discernable connection to a particular individual or site. Thus, FSA improperly withheld records that were segregable and disclosable under the withholding statute's exemptions for statistical information and aggregate information. Finally, FSA withheld essential data about federal farm loan payments and recipients. Thus, FSA improperly withheld records that were segregable and disclosable under the withholding statute's exemption for payment information.

FWW's June 2016 Request

161. Likewise, in response to FWW's June 2016 request, FSA relied on the same statute to withhold a variety of information, including "acreage amounts, details of the agricultural operation, and the use . . . of the land." However, FSA withheld records that were not provided by agricultural producers or landowners, such as environmental assessments prepared for and by FSA employees. Thus, FSA improperly withheld records that did not meet the specific criteria of the withholding statute. Moreover, FSA withheld numerical and/or quantitative information with no discernable connection to a particular individual or site (e.g., "acreage amounts"), as well as information from and/or about multiple data sources with no discernable connection to a particular individual or site. Thus, FSA improperly withheld records that were segregable and disclosable under the withholding statute's exemptions for statistical information and aggregate information. Finally, FSA withheld essential data about federal farm loan payments and recipients. Thus, FSA improperly withheld records that were segregable and disclosable under the withholding statute's exemption for payment information.

ALDF's October 2017 Request

162. In response to ALDF's October 2017 request, FSA relied on the same withholding statute to withhold a variety of information, including "loan amount, lender and number of acres." However, FSA withheld records that were not provided by agricultural producers or landowners, such as environmental assessments prepared for and by FSA employees. Thus, FSA improperly withheld records that did not meet the specific criteria of the withholding statute. Moreover, FSA withheld numerical and/or quantitative information with no discernable connection to a particular individual or site (e.g., "number of acres"), as well as information from and/or about multiple data sources with no discernable connection to a particular individual or site. Thus, FSA improperly withheld records that were segregable and disclosable under the withholding statute's exemptions for statistical information and aggregate information. In addition, FSA withheld essential data about federal farm loan payments and recipients (e.g., "loan amount" and "lender"). Thus, FSA improperly withheld records that were segregable and disclosable under the withholding statute's exemption for payment information.

163. In response to ALDF's November 2017 request, FSA relied on the same withholding statute to withhold a variety of information, including "legal descriptions of producer land . . . loan narratives, projected annual cash flow and income/expense trends." However, FSA withheld records that were not provided by agricultural producers or landowners, such as environmental assessments prepared for and by FSA employees. Thus, FSA improperly withheld records that did not meet the specific criteria of the withholding statute. Moreover, FSA withheld numerical and/or quantitative information with no discernable connection to a particular individual or site (e.g., "projected annual cash flow"), as well as information from and/or about multiple data sources with no discernable connection to a particular individual or site (e.g., "income/expense trends"). Thus, FSA improperly withheld records that were segregable and disclosable under the withholding statute's exemption for payment information.

ALDF's May 1, 2018 Request

In response to ALDF's May 1, 2018 request, FSA relied on the same withholding 164. statute to withhold a variety of information, including "information pertaining to acreage," "loan amount," and "number of acres." However, FSA withheld records that were not provided by agricultural producers or landowners, such as environmental assessments prepared for and by FSA employees. Thus, FSA improperly withheld records that did not meet the specific criteria of the withholding statute. Moreover, FSA withheld numerical and/or quantitative information with no discernable connection to a particular individual or site (e.g., "number of acres"), as well as information from and/or about multiple data sources with no discernable connection to a

165. In response to ALDF's May 25, 2018 request, FSA relied on the same withholding statute to withhold a variety of information, including "loan amount," and "number of acres." However, FSA withheld records that were not provided by agricultural producers or landowners, such as environmental assessments prepared for and by FSA employees. Thus, FSA improperly withheld records that did not meet the specific criteria of the withholding statute. Moreover, FSA withheld numerical and/or quantitative information with no discernable connection to a particular individual or site (e.g., "number of acres"), as well as information from and/or about multiple data sources with no discernable connection to a particular individual or site. Thus, FSA improperly withheld records that were segregable and disclosable under the withholding statute's exemptions for statistical information and aggregate information. In addition, FSA withheld essential data about federal farm loan payments and recipients (e.g., "loan amount"). Thus, FSA improperly withheld records that were segregable and disclosable under the withholding statute's exemption for payment information.

ALDF's September 2018 Request

In response to ALDF's September 2018 request, FSA relied on the same withholding statute to withhold a variety of information, including "maps, producer farm report data, [and] number of acres." However, FSA withheld records that were not provided by agricultural producers or landowners, such as environmental assessments prepared for and by FSA employees. Thus, FSA improperly withheld records that did not meet the specific criteria of the withholding statute. Moreover, FSA withheld numerical and/or quantitative information with no discernable connection to a particular individual or site (e.g., "number of acres"), as well as information from and/or about multiple data sources with no discernable connection to a particular individual or site (e.g., "maps"). Thus, FSA improperly withheld records that were segregable and disclosable under the withholding statute's exemptions for statistical information and aggregate information. In addition, FSA withheld essential data about federal farm loan payments and recipients. Thus, FSA improperly withheld records that were segregable and disclosable under the withholding statute's exemption for payment information.

- 167. Thus, FSA has a pattern and practice of improperly withholding responsive records from Plaintiffs under FOIA Exemption 3 by (1) withholding information that does not meet the withholding statute's specific criteria; (2) withholding information that falls within one of the withholding statute's exemptions; and (3) failing to segregate and release nonexempt information contained in responsive records.
- 168. FSA's pattern and practice has prevented Plaintiffs from obtaining the information they need to watchdog FSA's federal farm loan programs, analyze FSA's compliance with NEPA and other applicable statutes, and educate the public about FSA's activities and use of federal funds. Further, FSA's pattern and practice will significantly impair Plaintiffs' ability to access agency records in the future because Plaintiffs will continue to submit FOIA requests to FSA to obtain the information they need to fulfill their organizational missions.
- 169. Unless this Court grants the requested injunctive and declaratory relief, FSA will continue its pattern and practice of improperly withholding responsive records under FOIA Exemption 3, thereby depriving Plaintiffs of their statutory right to agency records, stymicing Plaintiffs' important monitoring and advocacy efforts, and enabling FSA to escape public scrutiny.

SIXTH CLAIM FOR RELIEF:

VIOLATION OF THE FREEDOM OF INFORMATION ACT

Pattern & Practice of Improperly Withholding Records under FOIA Exemption 6

- 170. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate the allegations made in all preceding paragraphs.
- 171. FSA withheld thousands of pages of responsive records from Plaintiffs by claiming that nonexempt information contained in responsive records fell under FOIA Exemption 6.

- 172. FOIA Exemption 6 only allows FSA to withhold "personnel and medical files and similar files" when the disclosure of such information "would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6). Exemption 6 only applies when a particular individual's privacy interest in nondisclosure clearly outweighs the public's interest in disclosure of the requested information. If there is no privacy interest at stake, or if an individual's privacy interest in nondisclosure is minimal, Exemption 6 does not apply.
- 173. Although FOIA requires agencies to construe exemptions narrowly and in favor of disclosure, FSA frequently withheld responsive records from Plaintiffs under Exemption 6 by construing the scope of this exemption too broadly. Specifically, FSA asserted that Exemption 6 protected all "personal information" about "individuals." However, Exemption 6 does not apply to all information about an individual, only sensitive or private information with an identifiable connection to a particular individual. Thus, FSA improperly withheld nonexempt information under Exemption 6 because FSA construed Exemption 6 too liberally.
- 174. Moreover, individual agricultural producers and landowners have little to no privacy interest in withholding the requested records because the requested records only pertain to voluntary business activities and/or government activities with no discernable connection to any particular producer, landowner, or site. Thus, FSA improperly withheld nonexempt information under Exemption 6 because FSA grossly exaggerated the privacy interests at stake.
- 175. Moreover, the public interest in disclosure of records relating to FSA's administration of federal farm loans and loan guarantees is significant because FSA uses taxpayer dollars to fund its federal farm loan programs, and there is very little information available to the public about FSA's use of such funds. In addition, the public has a significant interest in the environmental, economic, and public health impacts of FSA's federal farm loan programs. Without disclosure of the requested records, the public cannot effectively monitor FSA's administration of federal farm loan programs and its impacts. Thus, FSA improperly withheld nonexempt information under Exemption 6 because FSA failed to fully consider the public's significant public interest in disclosure.

FWW's June 2016 Request

For example, in response to FWW's June 2016 request, FSA relied on Exemption 6 to withhold a variety of information, including "acreage amounts, details of the agricultural operation, and the use . . . of the land." However, Exemption 6 does not apply because such information is neither personal in nature nor traceable to a particular person or site. Moreover, the public interest in disclosure is significant.

Public Justice's March 2017 Request

177. Likewise, in response to Public Justice's March 2017 request, FSA relied on Exemption 6 to withhold a variety of information, including "maps," "legal descriptions of producer land," "income/expense trends," "photographs of producer land," "loan narratives" and "appraisals," and "parcel data." However, Exemption 6 does not apply because such information is neither personal in nature nor traceable to a particular person or site. Moreover, the public interest in disclosure is significant.

ALDF's October 2017 Request

178. In response to ALDF's October 2017 request, FSA relied on Exemption 6 to withhold a variety of information, including "loan amount, lender and number of acres." However, Exemption 6 does not apply because such information is neither personal in nature nor traceable to a particular person or site. Moreover, the public interest in disclosure is significant.

ALDF's November 2017 Request

In response to ALDF's November 2017 request, FSA relied on Exemption 6 to 179. withhold a variety of information, including "maps, legal descriptions of producer land . . . loan narratives, projected annual cash flow and income/expense trends." However, Exemption 6 does not apply because such information is neither personal in nature nor traceable to a particular person or site. Moreover, the public interest in disclosure is significant.

ALDF's May 1, 2018 Request

180. In response to ALDF's May 1, 2018 request, FSA relied on Exemption 6 to withhold a variety of information, including "amount of the loan, . . . construction plans, site maps, producer Farm Data reports, facility detail information and photos of producers land." However,

Exemption 6 does not apply because such information is neither personal in nature nor traceable to a particular person or site. Moreover, the public interest in disclosure is significant.

181. In response to ALDF's May 25, 2018 request, FSA relied on Exemption 6 to withhold a variety of information, including "loan amount and number of acres." However, Exemption 6 does not apply because such information is neither personal in nature nor traceable to a particular person or site. Moreover, the public interest in disclosure is significant.

ALDF's September 2018 Request

- 182. In response to ALDF's September 2018 request, FSA relied on Exemption 6 to withhold a variety of information, including "maps, producer farm report data, number of acres and photos." However, Exemption 6 does not apply because such information is neither personal in nature nor traceable to a particular person or site. Moreover, the public interest in disclosure is significant.
- 183. Thus, FSA has a pattern and practice of improperly withholding responsive records from Plaintiffs under FOIA Exemption 6 by (1) exaggerating federal farm loan recipients' privacy interest in information with no traceable connection to a particular individual or site; (2) ignoring the public's significant interest in disclosure; and (3) failing to segregate and release nonexempt information contained in responsive records.
- 184. FSA's pattern and practice has prevented Plaintiffs from obtaining the information they need to watchdog FSA's federal farm loan programs, analyze FSA's compliance with NEPA and other applicable statutes, and educate the public about FSA's activities and use of federal funds. Further, FSA's pattern and practice will significantly impair Plaintiffs' ability to access agency records in the future because Plaintiffs will continue to submit FOIA requests to FSA to obtain the information they need to fulfill their organizational missions.
- 185. Unless this Court grants the requested injunctive and declaratory relief, FSA will continue its pattern and practice of improperly withholding responsive records under FOIA Exemption 6, thereby depriving Plaintiffs of their statutory right to agency records, stymicing
